HEROES OF THE GRAY

The Ocala Post Entertains Its Comrades of Marion and Surrounding Counties

Before the reunion meeting in the court house the Confederate veterans of the Ocala camp convened in the city hall, Commander Hubbard in the chair. The principal business of the gathering was to add the following names to its roll: John Proctor and Henry Shaw, Levon; L. L. Akins, Heidville; Jas. A. Driggs, Co. H. 9th Florida, Stanton; R. N. Fife, Reddick; L. D. Farmer, Orange Springs; T. J.
Sistrunk, Fellowship; W. W. Best, G.
W. Walters, R. J. Curry, — Priest, — Prevatt and — Watson.

Comrade C. M. Brown excused his presence, as he was absent at Tallahassee on state business.

Then the commander read a communication from Gen. Ballentine, of Fernandina, commander of the second brigade of Florida division of veterans, saying the brigade would hold a reunion and desired to know if Ocala wished their presence. It was then learned that the meeting had been called by the commander to convene in Ocala on January 14, 1902. It then came out that Gen. Ballentine had been invited to yesterday's meeting, but pressing business detained him.

Commander Hubbard stated that the Ocala Post was the banner one in the division, numbering 235 members.
The next largest post was at Fernandina, with 115 members. That the second brigade had desired to convene in Gainesville, but the camp that formerly existed there had been abandoned, hence Ocala was honored.

There are only six camps in this division.
The camp then formed and marched to the court house, where Commander Hubbard called on Col. Jno. M. Martin to preside, who invited Mrs. Fannie R.
Gary, president of the Ocala Daughters of the Confederacy, to the judge's stand and with her Mrs. Anna Hopkins, of Orange Lake, who with the president formed a magnificent duet of Southland feminine loyalty and devotion to the cause that cannot but arouse the intensest admiration of those who know of their zeal and divine concern for those who sacrificed all for what they conceived to be the right.

Col. Martin then introduced the orator of the day, Hon. Jno. G. Reardon, whom he had known as a boy, the soul of honor, too young to enter the service, but in the last days of the struggle, young though he was, he proffered his services.

Mr. Reardon said he was not worthy, but felt deeply the honor conferred. Was reminded he had not much time to speak, as dinner awaited them, as General Bullock had said so and acted as if he proposed to be the first at the sumptuous feast.

True, he was not a veteran or the son of a veteran, but had a mother whose whole soul was infused with the heroic spirit of the conflict.

While of tender years he proffered his services, but was turned back. He had since thought the future of the Confederacy would have been different had his spirit for war been accepted. (Laughter.)
He then humorously told of his war experience in North Carolina at Lincolnton, just before the armistice, when Stoneman's brigade of the union forces and Dukes' command of the Confederacy met in that town and his curiosity got the better of his discretion and he went up to the court house to see the introduction, but the song of a shell past his ears and the bullets of both forces whizzing around him did not cause him to stand on the order of his going, but he went to the rear at a gait that did credit to his racing qualities.

Mr. Reardon made a grand address.
It was not committed to paper. It came from a heart surcharged with sacred recollections and memories dear of achievements that when recited would stir the blood of the most sluggish and indifferent. We shall not attempt to go into details. It had to be heard to be appreciated. Simply the trend.

The war, he said, was the paradox of history. All parties were the cause of it, those for war and peace, but he did think the peacemakers did it, though the real cause of it could not

RHEINHAUER & CO.

The British war office called Baden-Powell to account for his seeming extravagance in paying an American manufacturer five times the usual English contract price for his cavalry-men's hats; but the General knew what he was about.

The hats were made by

JOHN B. STETSON

Ten thousand of them, and undoubtedly they are good today after a year's service, in spite of South African rain, dust and sunshine.

Hatters generally are afraid to tackle Stetson's hats because of the high price; but we find no difficulty in getting $5 for a soft hat of such remarkable quality.

We are not offering South African or "bronco buster" styles, but the up to date New York shapes, with the assurance of unusual satisfaction in hat service.

All other good sorts of hats, of course, but just now we are emphasizing Stetson's.

A DESPICABLE ACT

And One That Strikes at the Very Foundation of City's Safety—No Punishment Too Severe

Some miscreant unwhipped of justice, with the intention of disabling the fire department and bringing serious loss on the homes of Ocala, crept into the engine house the night previous to the fire that destroyed the house on the base ball grounds and stole the fire plug wrenches from the boxes on the hose wagons.

It was fortunate that Chief Bull discovered the loss and was able to replace these valuable tools. He is satisfied the deed was done with malicious intent. Without these wrenches no water can be turned on.

It is needless to add that if any party not connected with the fire department is seen meddling with property at headquarters it will not be well with them.

the prettiest line of men's neckwear ever displayed in the city.
